Did you get COVID-19 after being vaccinated?

No, the vaccine is designed to prevent disease and severe illness from COVID-19. While it's possible to get COVID-19 after being vaccinated, it's much less likely to happen than getting the disease without vaccination. Most people who do get COVID-19 after being vaccinated have mild symptoms or none at all. If you do get COVID-19 after being vaccinated, it's important to seek medical care if you need it. Remember, the benefits of vaccination far outweigh the risks.
For as long as artists have been producing art, religious iconography has been a mainstay. From the prehistoric cave paintings in Lascaux, France, to the contemporary works of artists such as Aleksandar Todorovic and Nadia Waheed, the practice of art as a means of representing spiritual devotion is as old as the practice itself.

Standing in front of one of her paintings, local artist Vanessa Rishel, whose pronouns are she/they, does their best to explain what it was that inspired them to produce it. The painting in question, “Our Actions Are Orchestrated From Above (Our Strings Entwined),” is hanging at their studio space in Bread & Salt, where they just finished a multi-month residency.

In stark black-and-white oils and acrylics, the painting depicts a cast of religious icons including an angel, a Mexican-inspired calaca, and, in the background, what appears to be Joseph speaking to a pregnant Mary.

“I think the root of all my work is trying to find a sense of reality, so there is a lot of iconography,” says Rishel, who says that a lot of their work from the past two years had a lot to do with living in the Church Lofts apartments in downtown San Diego. “It used to be a Baptist church in the early 1900s, so being quarantined there was a really interesting experience.”

As is the case with the other pieces in Rishel’s studio, “Our Actions Are Orchestrated From Above” is surrounded by a frenzy of notes and doodles written out on crumpled pieces of paper and receipts. Some are conceptual blueprints of the work itself, but some of the notes are broad, existential musings on life itself.

“A flood unleashed by an angry god.”

“God calls out taken to an extreme.”

San Ysidro painter Vanessa Rishel channels religious iconography and anime influences into a singular style.
